Todd & Corey,

I wanted to send a note and update you on my activities. I've been cashing my paychecks with ~~nothing~~ my article 10 identification. I take them to the bank of issue. The first time, they called my boss to verify that he wrote the check and I let them copy my ID for their records. Since then, I've cashed half a dozen checks, and there is never any issue.

I also went to San Diego for a friend's wedding. Salt Lake City TSA let me through with nothing more than a patdown, but I ended up talking to San Diego TSA for almost an hour before they finally let me through. My contacts were very professional and both were intrigued by my identification. They claimed they would investigate Article 10 citizenship and I gave them your website. I hope they are listening.

My next action is to take my ID down to the County Clerk's office (~~also~~ in Utah, the County Clerk issues passports).

Health * Happiness, Love * Light, Courage * Kittens.

Baron of America's Mountain,
Andrew Lemesany

DMM Handbook

12.3.3 Identification

When presenting a money order for payment, the customer seeking payment must sign in the presence of a USPS employee; suitable identification can be required. The USPS may refuse payment on any money order when the identity of the customer seeking payment is not proved to the satisfaction of the employee.

12.3.4 Acceptable Signature

The paying Post Office may accept any signature of the payee, purchaser, or endorsee that is not different from the name shown on the money order, subject to these conditions:

- a. A customer who cannot write may sign by using a mark, if a witness (who may not be a USPS employee) is present at the time of cashing.
- b. All money orders payable to a business firm, an organization, society, institution, or government agency must be signed in the name of the organization by an authorized representative (who must also sign with his or her own name and organizational title). Evidence of the representative's authority may be required.
- c. If the money order is drawn in favor of an official by name and presented by a successor, the successor must sign accordingly (e.g., "William Jones, treasurer, successor to George Thompson").
- d. Use of a title (e.g., Mrs., M.D.) is not required in signing a money order for payment, whether such title is used on the face of the money order.
- e. A stamped signature is an acceptable endorsement on a money order drawn in favor of a firm, corporation, association, society, or individual, when the money order is presented to a bank for payment. A Post Office accepts a stamped signature only if an agreement is on file specifying the individual responsible for the correctness of such payments
